County Jail Birds
Banquet On Beef,
Then Smoke Cigars

There was no turkey or fixings with the Thanksgiving dinner at the county jail and when the 165 prisoners partook of the noon feed they found the menu was the same as on other Thursdays.

However, the county prisoners had a plenty. They had boiled beef, potatoes, gravy, bread and coffee.

"I would have given my boarders something of a spread," said Sheriff McShane, "but it was impossible on account of the high cost of living. With turkey soaring up around 35 cents per pound and chicken about the same, you can't give men and women much of the white meat, or even the dark, for that matter, when you are serving meals at 10 cents per person."

Prisoners who were fortunate enough to have friends on the outside of the jail fared better than the mass of the inmates. A number of these persons were supplied with chicken, cake, pie and choice dainties, sent in during the early morning. Quite a quantity of cigars was donated by outsiders and these were distributed among the prisoners.

With the prisoners Thanksgiving was the same as any other day. They arose at the usual hour, did up the cell and corridor work and then sat around during the day, the monotony being broken only by the calls to meals.

Japan Does Not Like To Be Told Anything
By Younger Nation

"European nations are large agnostics in thought rather than religious," said Dr. Henry C. Mabie of Boston, who is in Omaha speaking under the auspices of the Baptist Brotherhood of Omaha. He spoke this morning at Grace Baptist church, Tenth and Arbor streets. His subject was "Christianity and the World War." He blamed the agnosticism of the European thought largely for the present warring condition of Europe, holding that if these people really were Christians at heart they would not be fighting today.

Dr. Mabie has traveled for twenty-five years in Europe and in the Orient, traveling much in Japan and China. He spoke of Japan and China as the awakening nations, and traced their progress in adopting the Christian religion. He said one of the difficulties the missionaries encounter in Japan is that Japan feels its dignity in being so old a nation.

"Why should you come here and endeavor to teach us religion, when America is so young a nation and we are so old a nation?" is what the Japanese say to the American missionaries.

Fourteen Charities
Are Endorsed by Omaha Retailers

Fourteen local charities were officially endorsed by the Associated Retailers, the action being taken by the board of directors. Every year the Associated Retailers hear the cases of the various charitable concerns wishing to canvass the city for funds, and either endorse or reject them. The endorsement from this association gives a charity some prestige in canvassing, especially among the retailers. The charities endorsed are:

Associated Jewish Charities, Social Settlement association, Visiting Nurses' association, Child's Saving institute, Children's Home society, St. James orphanage, Nebraska Prison association, the Creche, Young Men's Christian association, Young Women's Christian association, City mission, Old People's home, 2215 Wirt street; Volunteers of America, Scandinavian Young Women's Christian association.

A special committee of the association also endorsed the campaign for funds for the boy scout movement, the House of Hope campaign, and the campaign for funds for Brownell Hall.

REV. TITUS LOWE'S
THANKSGIVING DOG

Pastor Recites Story of Peaceable Collie as Parallel to Prohibition Fight.

PREDICTS A DRY NATION

Rev. Dr. Titus Lowe spoke a parable at the union Thanksgiving services of the First Methodist, First Congregational and Central United Presbyterian churches, held in the latter church, Thanksgiving morning. He told the story of a dog he once owned and from it drew a lesson, telling the story so well that he moved his large audience to tears, laughter and applause.

"I got our dog, Jack, when he was a pup," he said. "He was the delight of our children, but when he grew up I was disgusted to find that he was a coward. We'd take him out walking, but the minute another dog looked at him he was off, yelping for home. I told the man of whom I had bought him that Jack was a coward and no good."

Fighting Blood.
"You just wait," said this man. "That dog had a collie for a mother and a bulldog for a father. Sometime he'll remember what his father was. I waited and Jack just kept on being a coward. Then one day a big bully of a dog attacked Jack. It wasn't the first time and I guess Jack was tired of it. When I arrived on the scene a big crowd was around the dogs and I found the owner of the other dog trying to beat Jack off with a club. Jack had hold of that dog between the jaw and the collarbone and he had the bulldog grip on him. He had found what his jaws were good for. When we got them separated, the other dog rolled over, 'all in,' but Jack was able to navigate home under his own steam."

"Jack typifies to me the forces which are winning such wonderful victories in prohibition. For a long time we were 'collies.' We were good, kind, peaceable people. We busied ourselves with doing good, feeding the hungry, caring for the orphans, nursing the sick."

Dry's Aroused.
"But there came a time when we were aroused, when we became tired of bullying, when we remembered our 'bulldog' blood and leaped into the fight with victorious results."

"Only a few years ago when we heard men talk of a saloonless nation we were inclined to smile at them as dreamers. Our children might live to see it, we thought, but not we. Today that 'dream' is nearly realized. Four great states joined the dry column at the recent election and two others elected legislatures pledged to enact prohibitory statutes."

"This, then, is what we have to be most thankful for in the year, the fact that our civic consciousness and our national conscience have been reborn. Our material prosperity, the vast additions to our wealth from the soil, our throbbing industries, all these things are good and we are duly thankful for them. But the awakened national, state and city conscience is a much greater thing than these."

Rev. Dr. Hugh B. Speer, pastor of the Central United Presbyterian church, was in charge of the service. One of the prayers was offered by Rev. Fred J. Clark, new pastor of the First Congregational church. The offering was for the benefit of the Old People's home.

Mayor Dahlman is Member of Bishop's
Brownell Hall Team

Joining with a host of the city's leading men and women, Omaha's chief magistrate will serve as a volunteer worker in the Brownell Hall campaign corps, which sets out next week to raise a quarter-million building fund.

Mayor Dahlman yesterday became a member of the team which is headed by Bishop Arthur L. Williams, who began only on Tuesday the work of lining up his squad. The bishop lost no time in filling the ranks of his team, obtaining four workers in a few hours. In addition to the mayor, Ervime J. Brandeis, C. S. Montgomery and Chester H. Wells will be associated with Bishop Williams in the money-getting effort.

Many Families Made Happy Through
Efforts of the Omaha School Children

"I can now go home and eat my own Thanksgiving dinner with a feeling of thanks because I know that 250 families have been provided with the edible necessities which go to make up physical cheer on this day," remarked Mrs. G. W. Doane, superintendent of the Associated Charities.

She had the distribution well in hand before sundown Wednesday. Most of the provisions were received through the school donations which were delivered to 1206 Farnam street and then divided among the charitable organizations. A local firm gave the Associated Charities a barrel of spaghetti which was included in the baskets of provisions sent out by Mrs. Doane's staff.

Each basket was carefully packed, according to the size of the family. One basket was sent to a family of mother, father and seven children. An old man entered the charities office and said he believed he and his wife had been forgotten. His face bore lines of care.

"Why, you have not been forgotten," explained Mrs. Doane, as she pointed to the basket ready for the elderly twin. The old man's face brightened.

"I just put in an extra glass of jelly for you," whispered the superintendent.

"That was very kind of you," replied the elderly man.

UNION SERVICES
AT FIRST BAPTIST

Rev. E. D. Hull Says that a Nation Which Forgets God is Sure to Fall.

U. S. FOUNDERS HAD FAITH

Gathering at the First Baptist church, the congregations of that denomination, the First Presbyterian, Third Presbyterian, Westminster Presbyterian, Parkdale Presbyterian, First Christian, Hanscom Park Methodist and St. Mary's Avenue Congregational joined in holding union Thanksgiving services, Rev. E. D. Hull, pastor of the Hanscom Park Methodist, preaching the sermon. The music was by the regular choir of the First Baptist, and the collection, a rather liberal one, for the Old People's home.

Rev. Mr. Hull selected for the topic of his sermon the words, "Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin brings reproach upon the people." These words, he said, were those of Solomon and recorded in Proverbs. Arguing along the line of the topic, Rev. Mr. Hull asserted that the words of the text apply now and are as true as on the day when they were first spoken.

"These words," the speaker said, "are as true as the law of gravitation. God is no respecter of persons, or nations, and the man, woman or nation forgetting God in the conduct of affairs must go down to doom."

People Forget God.

In support of the contention, Rev. Mr. Hull cited the city of Babylon as an illustration, pointing to the fact that once it was the greatest, richest and most important city in the world. The people forgot God and retrogression set in and continued until now it is little more than a mass of ruins. Rome was another illustration that was pointed out as the result of a city and its people forgetting God.

"Drunk with its power and importance, Rome and its rulers bid defiance to God and God's laws and the blow that crushed the life out of Rome fell and," continued the speaker, "if America forgets God, it must decline, as have the nations of the far east."

Pioneers Were Believers.

The speaker told of conditions in 1776 when the thirteen American colonies had a population of less than 3,000,000, poor, without money, without commerce and unknown to the world, "but," he added, "those early settlers by putting their faith in and trusting to God, paved the way for the development of the greatest nation on earth, a nation of forty-eight states and more than 100,000,000 inhabitants."

Rev. Mr. Hull contended that the first and greatest reason for giving thanks is "the fact that God is the author of and is responsible for all of our greatness, but we must not be too greedy for wealth and power, as have been the people of Europe." He held that these things are not what constitute true and real greatness, but rather a character modeled after that possessed by the man of Galilee.
